Harvesting and vinification information

The climatic conditions were good during the 2014 season, with a long, dry harvesting period in the absence of rain. There were some episodes of frost in the spring and, although these did not affect the Alto Cachapoal, there was a slight fall-off in yields. The wines are eminently fruity, with good tannic concentration and a fresh, spicy personality.

Harvesting: first week of May.

Ageing: 10-12 months in barrels of French and American oak.
